Open Access
Publications that are free to read on the internet. The document can be downloaded, copied and distributed as an Open Access Publication as long as credit is given.

Open Access Gold
Journals which do not need a subscription or any other form of payment to access the content.

Open Access Green
Self-archiving articles (published in conventional subscription-based journals) in a subject or institutional repository.

Institutional Repository
An online collection of the scholarship of an institution’s researchers. Institutional repositories both preserve intellectual output and allow for wide distribution. Ex. digital.library.ryerson.ca

Subject Repository
An online collection of publications in a particular subject area. The repository collects, preserves and provides open access to the publications. Ex. arXiv, PubMed

Hybrid Open Access Journal
A journal where only some of the articles are openly available to readers without subscriptions. Authors must pay an “unlocking fee” to make their articles public.
